I believe that the AOL suit against Microsoft is not warranted and is doing Microsoft an injustice by prolonging this litigation. I could very well use Netscape as my browser, but prefer Internet Explorer which is an excellent product. AOL and the other companies that are seeking this suit know that Microsoft has cash and are just trying to get some of it into their own pockets. It would be better if they stopped this nonsense. They should get down to the business of running their own companies better and using innovations of their own to produce better software and not trying to blame Microsoft for their own mistakes and problems.
